

TITLE: Locating Integrative Health within Population Health: Creating an Innovative Degree Program

AUTHOR(S): Pamela Potter, Tanya Bachman, Kala Mayer

PRESENTER(S): Pamela Potter, Tanya Bachman, Kala Mayer

STUDENT SUBMISSION: No

TOPIC/TARGET AUDIENCE: Topic: Creating an Innovative Degree Program in Integrative Health and Population Health

Target Audiences: Public health practitioners, students, academics, population health educators, population health administrators

ABSTRACT: To introduce an innovative approach to population health through creating an undergraduate integrative health education curriculum that interweaves population health, health promotion and wellness concepts. This panel covers an overview of integrative health with two population-based course offerings as exemplars.

- OBJECTIVE(S):
1. Describe an Integrative Health approach to undergraduate education
 2. Explore the idea of an integrative approach to Food as Medicine in population health
 3. Discuss Community Organizing as an integrative health and wellness promotion strategy